History

Nakhon Nayok is a province located in the central region of Thailand. It is believed the province is a Dvaravati settlement, a part of an ancient rampart in Ban Dong Lakhon being testimony to the fact. As for the name of “Nakhon Nayok”, records dating back to the Ayutthaya period indicate that it was an Eastern frontier town during the reign of King U-Thong. In 1894, under the royal command of King Rama V, Nakhon Nayok was designated a part of Prachin Buri province. Eventually, it became a province of its own.

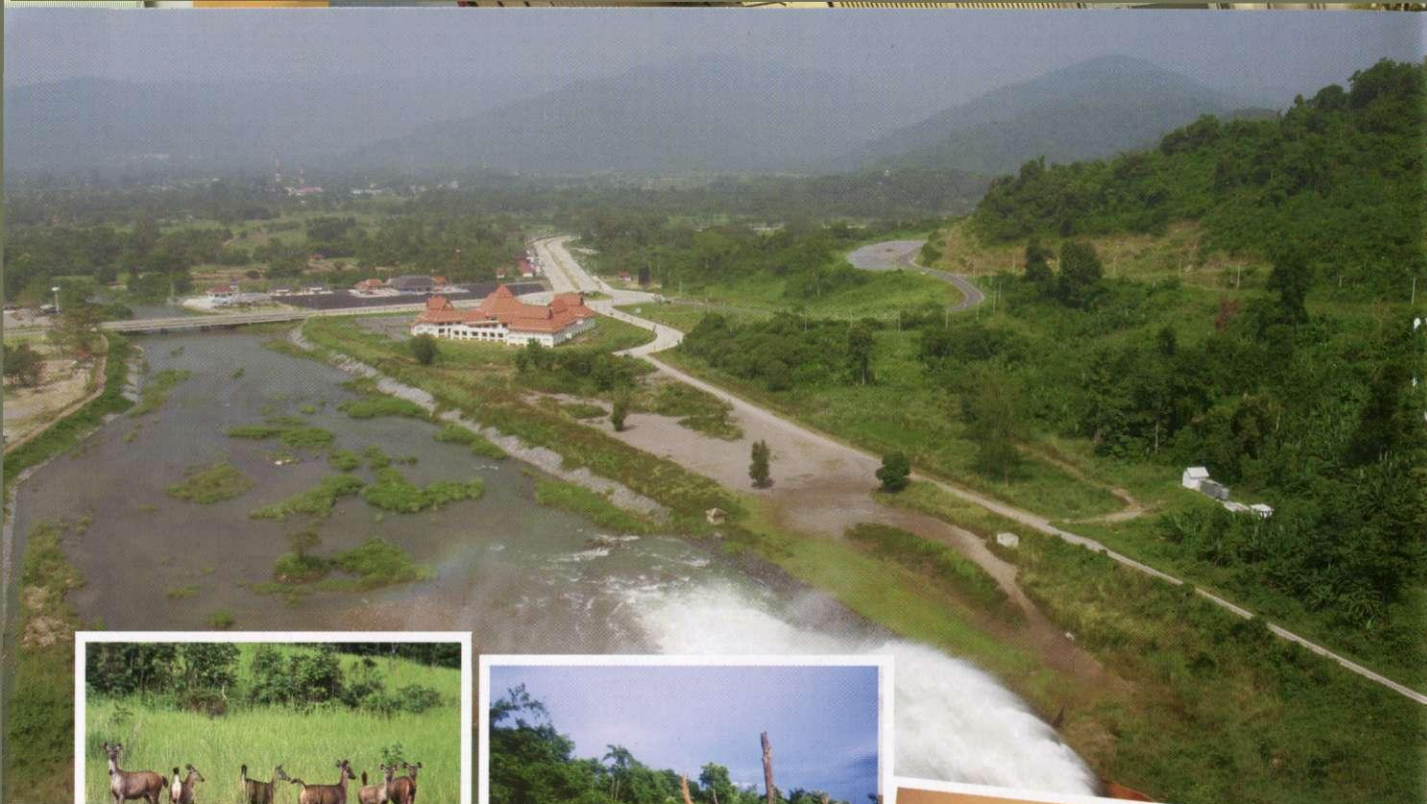

In the past Nakhon Nayok was called “Ban Na” (village of the rice field). From hearsay in the Ayutthaya period, Nakhon Nayok was a forested highland on which neither farming nor planting was fruitful. Jungle fever was everywhere, thus the town people migrated, leaving the place deserted. News of the plight of people reached the King. Subsequently, the King commanded that paddy field taxes be lifted to encourage the people to stay on; this worked and also enticed the people around the area to migrate to the town. After that it became a large community and the town was renowned as “Muang Nayok” (the town that paddy tax was lifted).

Geography

Nakhon Nayok sits mostly on a plateau. The province’s northern and eastern parts are tableland interspersed with mountains bordering the Dong Phrayayen mountain range. The central and southern regions are low-lying areas. Important mountains such as Khao Yai, Khao Khiew, Khao Cha-ngok, and Khao Nang Rong are the source of beautiful rivers and streams.

The province covers 2,122 square kilometres comprising four districts - Muang, Ongkharak, Pak Phli and Ban Na. The north borders Saraburi and Nakhon Ratchasima; the south borders Chachoengsao, the east borders Prachin Buri, and the west borders Pathum Thani.

Weather

Nakhon Nayok is generally arid and dry, interspersed with a humid climate. It has three distinctive seasons: The rainy season from June to October, winter from November to February, and summer from March to May.

How to get there

The province lies northeast of Bangkok, or less than two hours' drive from Bangkok. You can travel there by car in two ways: First: take Highway No. 305, along Rangsit canal passing Ongkharak District. This route is about 105 kilometers. Second: take Highway No.1, then a right turn at Hin Gong, and drive down Suwannason Road (Highway No. 33). This route is about 137 kilometers.

Attractions: Muang District

Khun Dan Prakarnchol Dam. The dam is located at Ban Tha Dan, Tambon Hin Tang, Muang District. It was known as Royal initiated Tha Dan Dam project. The construction started in 1999 and completed in 2003. His Majesty the King laid the cornerstone on June 2, 2001. The reservoir would facilitate storage of some 224 million cu.m. of water. The entire reservoir area is 3,087 rai. It is a roller - compacted concrete dam (RCC Dam). Its crest is 93 metres high and 2,594 metres long - the world longest RCC dam.

Khun Dan Prakarnchol Dam is a multi-purpose dam. Apart from the irrigation benefit, the dam is a new tourist attraction which Nakhon Nayok residents and all Thai can take pride. In front of the dam is the white body of water in the middle of the dam and the green rush forest which is the source of water in the dam. Behind the dam are the residential and farming areas for Nakhon Nayok residents. Tourists who love adventure can also enjoy rafting on Nakhon Nayok River throughout the year.

The lower part area behind the dam is developed into plant breeding area and learning centre building including Khun Dan Prakarnchol Dam Museum, a pier for rafting on Nakhon Nayok River and facilities to cater for tourists. Areas on the hills on the dams crest or upper part is a viewpoint and at the top of the hill is a Royal pavilion built in honor of His Majesty the King and members of the Royal family. Call 0-3738-4208-9 for more information.

Bhumirak Dhamachart Center

The Bhumirak Dhamachart Center is located behind Khun Dan Prakarnchol Dam, Ban Tha Dan, Tambon Hin Tang, Muang District, Nakhon Nayok. With deep gratitude towards His Majesty the King, the Chai Pattana Foundation and Vajiravudh College Alumni under His Royal Patronage intend to demonstrate loyalty by implementing activities under the King's initiative by seeking the King's permission to use his land 14-2-18 rai to construct an exhibition center to showcase the natural resource management under the King's sufficiency philosophy. The center consists of exhibition halls, meeting rooms, shops, outdoor theatres, demonstration farms, monkey-cheek theory demonstration farms, Vetiver grass farms, new agricultural theory farms, energy demonstration areas. Call 08-1964-5915, 08-1970-3779 for further information.

San Lak Muang (City Pillar Shrine).

At one time it was a shrine housing a 1-metre-high wooden column topped with a carving in the form of a lotus bud, situated near the Old City Wall. The neglected city pillar was move to be enshrined at the Red Building in the women's school at Sri Nakhon Nayok School. Later the shrine was rebuilt into an elegant four-cornered pavilion on the bank of Nakhon Nayok River in Chalermphrakiat Rama 9 Park. Nowadays, City Pillar Shrine is the most revered shrine of the town people.

Wat Yai Thakinaram

Luang Pho Sian Nakhon the revered Buddha image of the townspeople is enshrined at Bunnak Rakkitaram temple (Wat Tam). It is assumed that this sacred Buddha image dates back to Phra Ruang Era of the Sukhothai period. The head of a Buddha image was found during an excavation at a whisky brewery, located near Wat Nang Hong, Tambon Tha Chang in 1952. The head was kept at a school then known as Nayok Phitthaya School (which no longer exists), later it was enshrined at Wat Bunnak Rakkitaram. In 1968 the rest of the parts of the Buddha image other than the Buddha's head were recreated and a new chapel was constructed to house the newly completed Buddha image. The image has since then come to be known as "Luang Pho Sian Nakhon".

Wat Yai Thakinaram is situated in Tambon Ban Yai, Muang district, on the banks of Nakhon Nayok River. It is one of the country's oldest temples. It was said that Laotians from Vientiane migrated to the south of Nakhon Nayok during the reign of King Tak Sin. They built this temple in 1780 and named it Wat Yai Laos; it was later changed to Wat Yai Thakinaram in 1941. The beautiful Ubosot (chapel) of the temple built by Vientiane craftsmen is 6 meters wide, 10.15 meters long and 10 meters high surrounded by low walls. The chapel is made of brick and cement having crafted-wooden doors. The right door is crafted into a giant holding a truncheon on one hand and another hand placed on his waist. The wooden gable is crafted into an image of deity. The parapet has an eastern - style arch guarded by statues of soldiers holding a truncheon as gatekeepers, two at each door.

Emerald Buddha Replica Nakhon Nayok also has the biggest replica of the Emerald Buddha, Thailand's most revered Buddha image. The replica is on display at Wat Khiriwan's vihan on the mountain top. The temple, which is over 100 years old, lies on Tha Dan Road in Muang district. The distance from the town to the temple is 9 km. The replica is made of resin. Its three seasonal costumes are made of genuine diamonds and 2,000 rubies.

37th Quartermaster Infantry of Japanese Military Memorial

The 37th Quartermaster Infantry of the Japanese Military Memorial is located at Phrommani Temple, Tambon Sarika, 5 kilometres on the way to Namtok Sarika - Nang Rong. During World War II, the 37th Quartermaster Infantry camped at this temple. The Friends of Asian Alliance War Association built the memorial in 1992 to honour the 7,920 Thai soldiers who were recruited by the Japanese 37th Quartermaster Infantry and died in the war. Their possessions were moved from the temple and placed as relics in the memorial altar. The temple also has a number of wildlife statues such as elephants, deers and buffaloes.

There is an elaborately decorated Buddha image whose lips are red in the temple. According to hearsay, the Buddha image had been brought from Vientiane by the migrating Laotians during a war. The image is commonly called “Phra Phuttarup Pak Daeng” (the red-lipped Buddha image). Call 0-3738-6166-7 for more information.

Lord Buddha’s Footprint Replica at Khao Nang Buat is housed in a square structure with four arches and a pyramidal roof (mondop) on top of Nang Buat hill. The hill is located in Tambon Sarika,

Lord Buddha's Footprint Replica at Khao Nang Buat

9 kilometres from Nakhon Nayok town. The hill is about 100 metres high with a concrete staircase running from the base of the hill to the top. Visitors can reach the top by using the 227 steps. The replica of the Lord Buddha’s Footprint was built in 1858, the Year of the Cock, on the eighth day of the waning moon in the 12th month of the lunar calendar. The festivities to worship the Lord Buddha’s Footprint Replica are held annually in the middle of the fifth month of the lunar calendar.

Ban Dong Lakhon Archeological Site

is located in Tambon Dong Lakhon, 9 kilometres to the south of Nakhon Nayok town. The Fine Arts Department registered the place as national historical site on March 8, 1935. It was called “Muang Lap Lae” (a mysterious town). It is the site of the old town during the Khmer period, and is surrounded by earthen walls and culverts that the locals call “San Khu Muang”, meaning double city walls with canals all around, which is of the Dvaravati style common in central Thailand. There were two peaks of civilization, of which the first was between the 14th to the 16th Buddhist centuries, which was of the Dvaravati culture. The second peak was between the 17th and the 19th Buddhist centuries, which was a blend of Khmer culture and a pre - Ayutthaya architectural style. It is believed that during the 19th Buddhist century, Dong Lakhon people might have migrated to live along the major rivers in

Chulachomklao Royal Military Academy

Nakhon Nayok and it is assumed to be associated with Si Mahosot town, 55 kilometres away. Artefacts discovered here include an elaborate gold head of a Buddha image about the size of a fingertip, crab and elephant ring stamps, bronze rings, glass beads, rock beads, and bronze ear - rings.

According to legend, Muang Lup Lae was a town where the Queen of Cambodia resided, thus the movement of the common man was curtailed. The town itself was teeming with dense tall trees. Visitors to this town are often not able to find their way out and are kept in the mystical town. Prior to a Buddhist day and on a Buddhist day itself, locals are often quoted as being able to hear classical music, resembling the music played during the performance of a Thai classical play in a palace. Thus the locals named the area "Dong Lakhon" (play). Another assumption is that Dong Lakhon might have come from "Dong Nakhon".

Chulachomklao Royal Military Academy is located in Tambon Phrommani, 14 kilometres from Nakhon Nayok town and 75 kilometres from Bangkok using the Bangkok-Ongkharak route. The Academy is next to the Khao Cha-ngok Mountain and occupies an area of about 19,290 rai. It is a training centre for Thai military cadets. There are several interesting attractions in the academy compound, which can be accessed by car. However, if you should prefer the peace and quiet and would rather be close to nature, bicycles can be rented at the tourist centre in the academy compound. You can also take part in other sporting activities such as a walk rally, bicycle rally, golf, shooting or snooker. The academy also provides seminar rooms, restaurants, camping. Call 0-3739-3010 ext 62960-3 for tourist service centre.

The Shrine of Chao Pho Khun Dan is held in reverence by all Thais. Historically, Khun Dan was a commander in Nakhon Nayok during the Ayutthaya period. His heroic deed was the expulsion of the Khmer rebels in 1587, during the reign of King Naresuan the Great. Whilst Thailand was involved in a war with the Burmese, the Khmer took the opportunity to invade the country and herd residents of Prachin Buri back to Cambodia. The Khmers also conquered Prachin Buri and Nakhon Nayok. Khun Dan gathered people, retreated, and set up camp at Khao Cha-ngok. He later defeated and expelled the Khmers from Nakhon Nayok. There is also hearsay about his supernatural powers. During World War II, the Japanese army set up camp at Khao Cha-ngok. They vandalized and tore down the shrine. Subsequently, a lot of the Japanese troops died mysteriously. It is believed that the spirit of Khun Dan took its revenge.

Phra Phutthachai or Wat

Phra Chai was formerly named “Wat Khao Cha-ngok”. At first it was a painting on a cliff face of a small hill near Khao Cha-ngok. There is no exact history of Phra Phutthachai, however, but from word of mouth it is said that, originally, the painting depicted various images of Buddha in different postures. In 1942, the Army’s Map Department built a marble quarry at the foot of the hill and restored and enhanced the Buddha images. Phra Phutthachai is sacred to the townspeople. Every year during the 3rd month of the lunar calendar, the Phra Phutthachai Worship festivities are held.

Sarika Waterfall

Sarika waterfall is Nakhon Nayok’s most famous waterfall located in Tambon Sarika. It is situated to the northeast of Nakhon Nayok town.

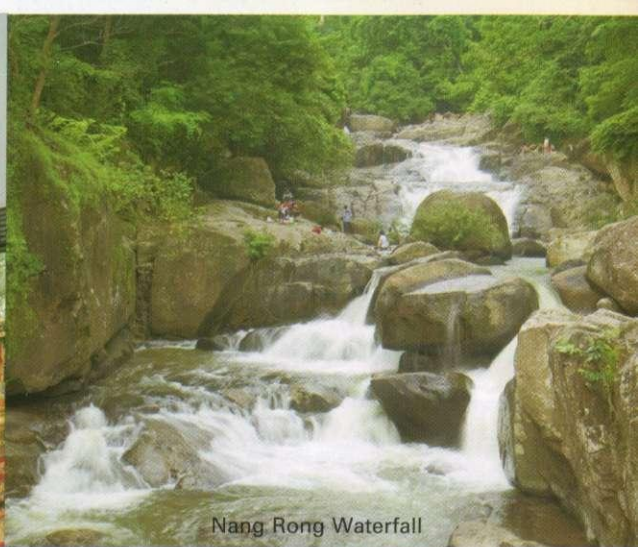

Sarika Waterfall

Sarika Cave

Nang Rong Waterfall

Getting there is very convenient. Drive along Highway 3049 for about 12 kilometres, then take a left turn into Highway 3050 for another 3 kilometres. The waterfall cascades down 9 levels, the top level being 200 metres high. Each level of the falls has a big basin which holds a large amount of water in the rainy season, but is dried in the dry season. Accommodation, restaurants and souvenir shops are available. Entrance fee for an adult is 40 baht and a child is 20 baht.

Nearby is “Sarika Cave” where the revered monk “Luang Pu Man” resided on his religious missions from 1917 - 1920. The cave's outer feature is a hill; within the cave there are residences for monks and nuns as well as Luang Pu Man's meditation place and a chapel which is located at the very top of the walkway up the hill.

Nang Rong Waterfall

Nang Rong waterfall is situated in Tambon Hin Tang. It is 20 kilometres to the northeast of Nakhon Nayok town on Highway 3049. It cascades down several levels onto rock formations, flowing through verdant forests. Although at every level the height of the falls is not much, its natural scenic beauty is what makes it a popular tourist attraction. Swimming is not recommended during rainy season because the water currents are strong and could be dangerous. Bungalows and restaurants are available near the falls.

Admission fees are:

• Bus (including passengers):	200 Baht
• Car (including passengers):	50 Baht
• Van:	100 Baht
• Motorcycle:	10 Baht
• Visitor:	10 Baht

Lan Rak Waterfall Lan Rak waterfall is situated in Tambon Phrommani on the way to Sarika and Nang Rong. You can get there by taking a left turn at Prachakasem intersection and then turn right. The attractive waterfall originates from a small stream passing through a large rocky formation at the end, then flowing strongly through another large formation at the foot of a small hill. This is a very unique and beautiful waterfall, but its beauty can be best enjoyed only in the rainy season.

Khao Yai National Park covers 2,168 square kilometres spanning Nakhon Nayok, Nakhon Ratchasima, Prachin Buri and Saraburi. The park has within its boundaries many thick, flourishing forests and is now home to wild animals and exotic plants. It was Thailand's first national park, being established on September 18, 1962 and was declared as World Heritage Site by the United Nations Educational,

Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) on July 14, 2005. The highest peak in Khao Yai is Yod Khao Laem, which is 1,292 metres above sea level. The road to Khao Yai is well paved and very convenient. Take Highway 33 and turn left at Nern Hom Intersection and drive along for 41 kilometres to the park's office. You'll find several viewpoints and beautiful waterfalls here:

Khao Yai National Park

Heo Narok Waterfall This largest and highest waterfall is the highlight of the park and is located at the south end. To get there, take Suwannasorn Road from Nakhon Nayok town, turn left at Nern Hom Intersection to Highway 3077 which is the up-hill route to Khao Yai. At Km 24, there is a two-kilometre walking path to Heo Narok Waterfall. There are 3 levels of falls. The first level is about 60 metres high, with the angle of flow being 90 degrees. The total height of the falls is about 150 metres. The water currents are very strong during rainy season.

Kongkaew Waterfall This lower-reach waterfall originates at the Hui Lam Tha Klong. Hui Lam Tha Klong is on the border of Nakhon Nayok and Nakhon Ratchasima provinces, but Kongkaew waterfall is located only about 100 metres from Khao Yai National Park's office.

Heo Suwat Waterfall This well-known waterfall is located at the end of Thanarat Road cascading down from a 25-metres high cliff. In the rainy season the water flows swiftly. In dry season, visitors can walk to the cliff.

Heo Sai Waterfall It is located next to Heo Suwat waterfall. This waterfall is spread wide over a cliff and is 5 metres high. To get to the spot, walk from Heo Suwat waterfall about 1.5 km.

Pha Kluay Mai Waterfall This medium-sized waterfall is located in Hui Lam Tha Klong on the way to Heo Suwat waterfall. Tourists can travel either by car or on foot. There is also the Whaidaeng Orchids, the symbol of the waterfall, growing at Pha Kluay Mai waterfall. The Whaidaeng Orchids blossom in April. There are several other waterfalls that are accessible only by foot such as Huay Krok De, Heopraturun, Pha Krachai, Tadtapoo, Wang Heo, Maeplong, Phachompu, Pha Tad, Manao and Tadtakong. Tourists can enjoy eco-tourism and agro-tourism at Tambon Hintang where villagers sell a variety of handicrafts which are famous products of Nakhon Nayok. The locals grow fruits as their main job and also earn extra income from giving traditional massage and providing homestay for tourists.

Sai Thong Reservoir Sai Thong Reservoir is located in Tambon Khao Phra, on the same road as Huai Prue Reservoir, but 4 kilometres farther away. This small reservoir offers a natural mountainous landscape. Two kilometres farther from the reservoir is the Sai Thong Falls. The small waterfall runs throughout the year and is accessible by a 30-minute walk from the reservoir.

Huai Prue Reservoir Huai Prue Reservoir is situated in Tambon Khao Phra. You can reach it by taking a left turn at the kilometer-1 marker of the Sarikanang Rong Road into Khao Thurian Road for another 11 kilometres. This is a small reservoir by volume but has a large water surface. The reservoir is filled all year round and surrounded by an unpaved road. Because of its beautiful landscape, local organization is developing the area into a recreational attraction for the public.

Chi Tek Lim

The God of Luck, “Chai Sing Eah”, is situated in Chi Tek Lim Place in Tambon Sri Chulās Ban Bang Hoi on Nakhon Nayok - Ban Sang Road. The two-metre-wide image was constructed in proportion. Thai or Chinese visitors who catch a glimpse of the image will admire it, with faith and believe that the god helps bring luck and prosperity. When people in Bangkok’s Yaowaraj, the country’s China Town, celebrated its 222nd anniversary in February 2004, Chai Sing Eah was taken to the spot so that people could pay their respects. This made the image even more popular. Chai Sing Eah is made of jade weighing 1,000 kilogrammes, the world largest jade statue. Chi Tek Lim Place also consists of several other gods and goddesses that are revered by Thai as well as foreign visitors.

Attractions: Ongkharak District.

Chao Phor Ongkharak Shrine is located on the banks of Nakhon Nayok River in Tambon Sansaimun. As the story goes, after King Rama V ascended to the throne, he visited Prachin Buri through the Nakhon Nayok River and camped at the area. His security guard fell ill and died. To remember the guard, he ordered the construction of a shrine and named it the Chao Phor Ongkharak Shrine, which later became the name of the district. The whirlpool near the shrine is very strong. The water here was used to make

Festivals

Sweet Plum Mango and Nakhon Nayok Products Fair take place annually during February-March in front of the City Hall. It is held to promote Ma-prang (sweet plum mangoes) and other agricultural products and handicrafts. The fair features a procession of agricultural products, sweet plum mango contests, agricultural product contests, sweet plum mango beauty pageants, student performances, stalls featuring goods from the public and private sectors as well as sale of inexpensive products.

Ongkharak Ornamental Plants and Flowers Fair is held every April at Khlong 15, Tambon Bang Pla Kot, Ongkharak District. Included are contests of ornamental plants and flowers, mini-garden arrangements, and an academic exhibition of plants and flowers.

The Nakhon Nayok Red Cross Fair is held annually during December - January at the Nakhon Nayok Municipality on Suwannasorn Road. Visitors can enjoy various activities in the fair such as contests of Nakhon Nayok handicrafts and agricultural products, OTOP products and adventurous games and activities.

Tak Bat Thewo Rohana Fair is a festivity where offerings are made to monks. The festivity is held annually on the 1st day of the waning moon of the 11th month of the lunar calendar or the end of Buddhist lent. During the festivity, a number of monks descend from Wat Khao Nang Buat to accept offerings from the townspeople.

Thai Merit Making (Sat Thai) & Long boat Racing Festival is held annually in October at Wat Thawiphoon Rangsan, Ongkharak District. The fair showcases a variety of long-boat racing, and a Krayasat contest (Krayasat is a sticky paste made from rice, bean, sesame and sugar, usually eaten during Sat Thai Festival).

Khun Dan Prakarnchol Dam Marathon held annually in September. Runners who join the event will capture the prestigious trophies from Their Majesties the King and the Queen as well as Princess Maha Chakri Sirindhorn. The event also features mini-marathon, running and jogging for health.
